Russell was incorporated as a town February 25, 1792, from part of that part of Westfield called the "New Addition", and from part of Montgomery. It is in Hampden County, which was set off from Hampshire County in 1812. Russell is situated on the Westfield river. It is bounded on the north by Montgomery, by Granville on the south, Westfield on the east, and by Blandford on the west. A main highway to the northwest now passes through here.

CENTER CEMETERY

This cemetery is situated at the southern part of Russell village, between Route 20 and the Old Westfield Road. It can be entered from either street. It is on a wide slope, divided by a road, extending between these streets Some very old stones are on the northern side in the northeast corner. The stones are copied from the west side toward Route 20, but are not in definite rows.

HAZARD POND CEMETERY
(Known as "The Pond" Cemetery)

This pond is now known as Russell Pond. This was the first place settled in what is now Russell. Robert Hazard was one of the first settlers. For many years this was the center of the town, and the town hall was here. That was burned many years ago. A few old cellar holes are still to be seen there.
